None of the material was sold-none of it was charged for in any way-it was all given away free of cost to American soldiers and sailors, and what is most remarkable is that this amount represents athletic equipment for foreign countries only, and does not represent the vast quantities disposed of in the "home

This enormous bill, eighty per cent of which was distributed between January 1 and June 30, 1919, and the balance between July 1 and December 1, 1918, while the war was at its height covers all angles of sports.
